

Master of Science in Taxation

Ranked as one of the top graduate tax programs in the U.S., the Master of Science in Taxation (MST) emphasizes critical-thinking and practical skills that prepare you for employment in international accounting firms, corporate tax departments, wealth management firms, and local and regional accounting firms. The program, with more than 3,000 alumni, is the largest graduate tax program in New England and one of the largest in the country.

Bentley's MST is taught by experienced tax practitioners who bring real-world situations into the classroom. Faculty includes current and former Big Four partners and corporate tax department vice presidents, and our curriculum uses the latest online-learning technologies, offering you the flexibility to attend courses online or on campus.

Program Features

- Research and analyze complicated fact patterns.
- Learn to develop and implement successful tax strategies.
- Communicate findings to tax and business professionals.
- Question and assess ethical responsibility.
- Work toward the 150-academic-credit-hour requirement for licensing as a certified public accountant (CPA) in many states, including Massachusetts.

Learn On Campus or Online

All courses in the MST program use the latest technologies for online learning, so students have the option of attending class either on campus or from their home or office. Online and on-campus classes take place simultaneously, fostering discussion among all students and the instructor. This high-tech approach brings together voice, video, data and graphics in a structured learning environment that combines online convenience with all the benefits of the classroom experience.

Career Outcomes

The MST prepares you for careers at:

- International accounting firms
- Corporate tax departments
- Wealth management firms
- Regional and local accounting firms
