LANGUAGE, CULTURE, AND BUSINESS

Our Language, Culture, and Business (LCB) major is designed to prepare students to apply their language and culture skills and knowledge in their professional careers. Unlike traditional language and culture majors, Bentley's LCB major puts less of an emphasis on literature and linguistics and focuses instead on practical applications of the language and study of world cultures, including the culture of business in other parts of the world. Our curriculum includes advanced grammar courses in composition and conversation, translation courses, Language for Business courses, as well as courses on film, literature, and other forms of cultural production. The major is designed for language students at all levels, according to the specialization chosen. All students must also complete an applied learning experience, which may include a study abroad program or an internship (either at home or abroad).
