

Nien-hê Hsieh

Nien-hê Hsieh is Professor of Business Administration and Joseph L. Rice, III Faculty Fellow at Harvard Business School. He serves as Co-Director of Rapid Response Impact Initiatives at the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics and is a Faculty Associate of the Berkman Klein Center for Internet and Society.

Professor Hsieh's research and teaching aims at helping business leaders and organizations determine and deliver on their responsibilities. He also studies what democratic values require for economic policies and institutions. He has written on a variety of topics, including worker participation in the management and governance of firms, the responsibilities of companies for human rights, the ownership of productive property, and choices involving incommensurable values.

In current research, he examines the role for an ethic of care in providing guidance for business actors and organizations and for structuring economic policies and institutions. He takes up this inquiry in a variety of business contexts, including social and news media and the organization of work.

His work has been published in Business Ethics Quarterly, Business and Human Rights Journal, Economics and Philosophy, The Journal of Political Philosophy, Philosophy and Public Affairs, Social Theory and Practice, Utilitas, and various other journals.

He is past president of the Society for Business Ethics and taught previously at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.
