The environment is hugely important to all of us, and business activity can have a major impact on its health. This panel brings together academics and practitioners to discuss what businesses can and should be doing to protect the environment. Among the questions we'll consider are: Which industries are focused on environmental concerns, and why? What's the connection between ESG investing and environmental impact? What roles do managers, boards, and employees play? What are the relevant laws and regulations, and are they the right ones? More generally, what should businesses be doing to preserve and protect the environment? We look forward to hearing your questions as well.

Presented by the Hoffman Center for Business Ethics at Bentley University.

Ryan Bouldin, Associate Professor and Chair, Natural and Applied Sciences

Pamela Lenehan, Board Director, Ridgehill Consulting

Christopher Thomas, Director, Global Sustainability Gates Industrial Corp.
